Turn on All the Lights is an interactive workshop aimed at seeing a situation through different filters, and assembling the whole picture before jumping to a conclusion. The people who see a different picture from yours have something to offer, provided you are willing to take the time to look.

Our organization helps your organization turn on all the lights without dimming any of the colors that are currently bright. Keep doing what you do well, and add new capabilities. We work with leaders who want to nurture a culture of quality and innovation that is respectful of the people who make it all happen.

Corporate Training:

We offer lunch-and-learn, half-day, and full day sessions with material based on the book, Colorful Leadership. Sessions are interactive and aimed at developing an understanding of the material so it can be applied immediately to work situations.

No two sessions are alike because we work with the sponsors to discuss the organization's goals, aligning the workshop content to current needs and future opportunities.

Prices vary based on location, program length, and number of participants. Contact us for more information.

Steve Wille, author of Colorful Leadership, has over 25 years experience in senior level corporate information technology management. His workshops for project managers and material on constructive conflict has been published and taught internationally.
